

Occupy: From Encampments to Revolution

Media release 25 May 2024

What reflections on Occupy Wall Street (OWS) apply to climate actions, social justice encampments and ecological blockades and protests today? In her book Organizing Occupy Wall Street: This is Just Practice and her film All Day, All Week Marisa Holmes tells lively stories we need to know.

‘it is imperative that we tell our own stories, from the streets, and keep radical history alive’

Marisa Holmes is a NY-based activist, organiser, filmmaker and writer. She was an occupier from day one of OWS and has since been active in its many offshoots such as Strike Debt, and Occupy Sandy, anti-racist solidarity work in Black Lives Matter, and anti-fascism.

Marisa’s All Day All Week: An Occupy Wall Street Story (director) captures the Zuccotti Park occupation by drawing on extensive footage and her book Organizing OWS studies the movement’s processes and structures based on assemblies, collective statements and live tweets. She offers the good, bad, and ugly of the OWS moment – what worked and what didn’t, the lessons and potential for future change.

6 pm Thursday 27 June | Balit-mil Room | Victorian Trades Hall, Carlton

All Day, All Week film and talk. NY-based filmmaker, Occupy organiser and author Marisa Holmes | Q&A facilitated by Holly Hammond from The Commons Library Hosted by New International Bookshop (NIBS)

6 pm Friday 28 June | Northern Arts Hotel 359 Barker St Castlemaine

Marisa Holmes, NY-based Occupy organiser, activist, filmmaker and author conversing with Cam Walker, Friends of the Earth Campaigns Co-ordinator Hosted by Castlemaine Free University and Degrowth Central Victoria

3 pm Sunday 30 June | Black Spark Cultural Centre | Northcote

Marisa Holmes, NY-based Occupy organiser, filmmaker and author conversing with activist historian Iain McIntyre.

Host Black Spark Invisible Committee & The Commons Social Change Library

All events are free. Contact: Anitra Nelson 0426766755